Water is the source of life and is life itself. It flows and circulates in cycles by nature, and if it cannot flow and circulate, it will decompose or become toxic due to changes in its properties. These principles also apply to the water introduced into our bodies.

Water makes up more than 83% of the blood. So it is essentially water that flows throughout the body. When blood (water) becomes acidic due to sugar, fat, waste and active oxygen, our immune system gets compromised, leaving us vulnerable to illnesses, and our circulation system will also be impaired.

This eventually leads to the malfunctioning of the DNA, and the breakdown of the organs. This explains the reason behind the growing prevalence of intractable diseases that arise spontaneously, without an actual transmission of a disease.

Water is capable of bringing forth good health or even illness. One must understand that life begins from water, and so does health. It is not life that governs over water, but it is water that governs over life.

There are many places that sell health products (drugs and therapeutic agents, etc.), but none of them can be held responsible for your health. It is you, who must take responsibility for your own health, meaning that you must take action, knowing that it is only with prudence that you can maintain your health.
